AGAINST RUSSELL SAGE.

DECISION ON HIS APPEAL IN THE LAID-LAW CASE.

THE JUDGMENT FOR $40,000 AFFIRMED, WITH COSTS OF NEARLY $3,500-JUSTICE INGRAHAM'S RULINGS AND CHARGE SUSTAINED.

A decision affirming the judgment of $40,000 obtained by William R. Laidlaw against Russell Sage was handed down yesterday by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Justice Patterson wrote the decision, and all of the other justices concurred in it. In the afternoon Russell Sage refused to talk about the decision, and Colonel James, is counsel, also declined to make any statement. The case, however, is sure to be carried to the

The Laidiaw-Sage suit has become well known to the public on account of the fact that it has been before a jury three times, and each time Mr. Sage has been subjected to a tantalizing cross-examinaon by Joseph H. Choate, Mr. Laidlaw's counsel, Mr. Laidiaw was injured on December 4, 1891, when the madman Norcross attempted to blow up Mr. Sage's office at No. 71 Broadway. Mr. Laidlaw asserted that Mr. Sage purposely used him as a shield against the synamiter and thus escaped injury.

The suit was begun in May 25, 1892. It was called for trial in the June following, and the complaint was dismissed by Justice Andrews. The General seed by Justice Andrews. The General Term ordered a new trial. It was held in April, 1894, before Justice Patterson and a jury, and reulted in a verdict for Mr. Laidlaw of $25,000. The General Term reversed that finding, and a third trial, in January, 1895, resulted in a disagreement. The fourth and last trial was before Justice Ingraham and a jury in June last. It was against the judgment of $40,000 then given that the appeal, decided yesterday, was taken. In their decision the Justices say:

We are asked to reverse the judgment appealed from, and to send this cause back for a fifth trial upon a record containing over two hundred exceptions, applying in various ways to almost everything, not, in the interest of the defendant, said or done by the justice who presided at the last trial. We have carefully examined the whole case, and find there was no error committed of a character to call for the resulumission of the issues to a jury. The decision handles askide the exceptions to Justice was the property of the control of the same to Justice and the same trial that the control of the same trial tri The decision brushes aside the exceptions to Jus-

find there was no error committed of a Charteet to call for the resubmission of the issues to a jury. The decision brushes aside the exceptions to Justice Ingraham's charge to the jury in these words: With the single exception of the so-called shifting of the burden of proof, the charge was entirely correct on the main features objected to, and if there was an error in that particular, it was greatly to the advantage of Mr. Sage. We are next to consider the errors assigned as having been committed during the progress of the trial, and of these we find the learned counsel for the defendant laxy particular stress upon the admission of the testimony of the witness Baillard and upon the course counsel was permitted to pursue on the cross-examination of Mr. Sage. Baillard who was not called on any of the three preceding trials, testified under objection that after the explosion, and when Mr. Sage was receiving attention in O'Connell's drug store, a man, pointed out to him as Mr. Sage, said something about being protected, about a protection that he had had from the explosion. That this testimony was all important cannot be questioned. It was relied upon as an admission by Sage that something had happened to benefit him or save him from more severe injuries than thore he actually sustained, and it was sought to weave it into the fabric of the plaintiff's case by connecting it with the claim that nothing else occurred or could have occurred that would have afforded protection except the very act which Laidlaw alleged was committed by the defendant. Baillard could not swear from personal knowledge that Mr. Sage was the person who made the remark he heard.

Did the surrounding circumstances point to Mr. Sage as the person who made the alleged remark? Mr. Sage was pointed out to the witness by O'Connell or some one else. He describes the person who spoke. The furry was rightly charged, 'Unless you are satisfied Mr. Sage made the remark, you are not to consider the testimony at all.' That Halllard was contradicted was a m

Referring to the objection to the cross-examina tion of Mr. Sage, the Justices say:

tion of Mr. Sage, the Justices say:

It was entirely within the discretion of the trial judge to determine how far he would allow questions disparaging to a witness, and not relevant to the issue. We are not called upon to approve or condemn the course of examination pursued by counsel on either side, but merely to say that we find no legal ground for a reversal of the judgment by reason of any of the matters connected with the cross-examination of Mr. Sage. Now, it is incontrovertible that Mr. Sage knew of the danger in Norcross's presence, and Ladidaw did not. Mr. Sage denies that he put his hards on Laidiaw, Ladidaw says Sage put out his hand, and gently and quietly drew him before him, and then spoke to Norcross. The jury believed Laidiaw.

The opinion goes on to analyze the evidence of the experts, who testified on the force and direction of certain explosives, introduced at the trial, to show that if Laidlaw sheltered Mr. Sage the injuries to Mr. Sage's hands could not have occurred, and con-

Mr. Sage's hands could not have occurred, and concludes:

If we could say at what fraction of a second those injuries were inflicted an argument might be drawn to support the defendant's view, but it is all a matter of conjecture, and the argument of impossibility cannot be allowed to prevail. We have thus considered the material points urged by the learned and zealous counsel of the defendant, and repeat that we would not be justified in subjecting these parties again to a retrial of the cause. It is in a better position now than it ever has been for the ultimate judgment of the Court of Appeals, and we have endeavored to set forth our reasons for affirming the judgment in such a way that it may be reviewed on this record in the light of what we conceive to be the true state of the case, as it has been presented to us. In conclusion, it is to be said that we do not consider the verdict excessive under all the circumstances of the case. The judgment must be affirmed with costs.

The costs amount to nearly $3,500.

Penn., had agreed upon a basis of consolidation and would form a biscuit trust, with a capital of company, when seen by a Tribune reporter at the Hotel Normandie, Broadway and Thirty-eighth-st., last night, said that so far as his company was concerned there was absolutely no foundation for the report, and that he had no knowledge of any contemplated consolidation of other companies. George P. Johnson, treasurer of the New-York Biscuit Company, who was seen at his home, No. 113 West Eighty-sixth-st., made a similar denial.

WORK OF THE LOAN RELIEF ASSOCIATION. The eighteenth annual meeting of the Loan Relief Association was held last evening at the he one of the members. The Rev. Dr. John Hall pre-sided, and spoke on the work done by the society. He dwelt upon the intelligence needed in giving charity, and said that the work accomplished by the association was highly commendable. The association lends money to those who need it, doing it upon a strictly business basis. These transac-

it upon a strictly business basis. These transactions have been done in such a businesslike manner that in seventeen years there has only been $11 lost. The persons who have been obliged to borrow in the course of the last year have displayed such promptness in repaying their loans that not a cent was lost to the society.

The association, which is under the management of women, provides work, as far as possible, for those out of employment. It supplies medical attendance when the patients are unable to procure it, and lends articles necessary for the comfort and recovery of the sick. The money is lent without interest, but on good security, and it may be repaid in cash or work. The society gives legal aid and protection to poor persons who are defrauded or oppressed. It provides lessons in sewing, care of the sick and sanitary law.

Last year $1.378.50 was lent. Over 1,500 calls were made by the missionary nurse. In the course of the association, and relief was obtained for more than a hundred families.

The officers of the association are: President, Miss Avery; vice-president, Mrs. Robert J. Sharpe; secretary, Mrs. J. W. Auchincloss; treasurer, Mrs. H. C. Phillips.
